

Beet - Character Description

Beet Beet is a young boy who has always desired to be the strongest Buster. He aspires to be like his heroes, the Zenon Warriors, who are known as the strongest of all Busters. However, unknown to Beet, the leader of the Zenon Warriors is his brother. When Beet was a baby, Zenon wanted Beet to stay away the path he chose, wanting him to live a life of peace which he tried to give him. One day, Beet told his heroes he had become a Buster, they quickly told him to quit, telling him he was not fit for such a thing. Beet, however, believed that Busters are fighters for justice and continued the hard Buster life. However due to a fight with Beltoze, the "King of Tragedy", the strongest Vandel of all, the Zenon Warriors were critically hit. To make things worse, Beet, showed up to the fight trying to cheer his heroes. Beleteoze saw Beet and rapidly took him as a hostage and mortally wounded him. Seeing this horror, the Zenon Warriors became distracted and were hit by Beleteoze's most powerful attack, the Phantom Explosion. Thus, after receiving such an attack, they were left at a critical state. Worst of all, Beet was about to die. To save his life, they decided to give up their lives and give Beet part of their souls which were sealed in their Saiga, the power symbol of a Buster. Beet reluctantly tries to stop this, however, he is finally told that Zenon is his brother, and in a dramatic moment, Beet sees his heroes leave to try and defeat Beltoze- even without any Divine Power or Saiga. Seeing them leave, Beet promises that he will become the strongest Buster and end the suffering Vandels cause to the world. Thus Beet grows over three years and begins learning to handle his gift, and founds the Beet Warriors to end the Dark Century. Beet is not particularly intelligent (something to which he openly admits) but he has a good heart. He is not able to use Divine Power as most of his fellow Busters can which sometimes makes Beet ashamed, though his amazing use of Saiga show that Beet is truly at another level. Beet also has his ability to stay awake for three days, after which he falls into an almost comatose sleep for one day. He is a reckless prodigy on the battlefield, defeating strong monsters and Vandels (just barely) relying on his Saiga, his will to complete his goal, his luck, and his friends. Many, however, believe that such luck might also show that Beet has true strength within him- something that he has not truly developed. Beet is angry that other Busters are mostly corrupt, since he believes that they must protect others at all times. He likes to help people and never asks for money in return, except the Buster reward money which is given when you defeat a Vandel or level up. Since he does not use money, he usually camps in the wilderness and eats bugs which are free- much to his teammates' dismay. Currently, Beet has a one-star bounty on his head, although this knowledge has only been released to the seven-star vandels. These Vandels drew cards to determine the order of who gets to attempt to kill Beet. This bounty was placed on his head after he managed to kill Grineed.

Saigas Excellion Blade: This is an extremely strong Saiga, controlled by Beet's brother Zenon. It is a powerful sword materialized by the Divine Power of Light. Its appearance, with its angelic wings, Reflects its majestic, heavenly force. Beet can materialize an imperfect Excellion Blade but it is still considered a lethal weapon against the weaker vandels. It is also the Saiga he can use while under intense gravity due to its nature and effect on the user, increasing the wielder's moving speed and jumping capabilities.

Burning Lance: This is the Saiga of Laio. Laio, the lead attacker of the Zenon Warriors, was closest to Beet. Since Beet learned the Sohjutsu (Art of the Spear) from Laio, he uses this Saiga the most often. Born out of the Divine Power of Fire, this spear always radiates with heat and burns the bodies of its enemies as it slices through their flesh. As a first choice, it's the best weapon to use against Vandels. The Burning Lance can also extend, and gain a second spear head on its other end as shown in Beets brief battle against the Winged Knight.

Cyclone Gunner: This is the Saiga of Alside, another member of the Zenon Warriors. He is known for his silent presence and his accurate shots. Materialized by the Divine Power of Wind, it has incredible speed. The damage it can inflict is immense, and it can bring forth an enormous plume of smoke wherever its bullet hits. The blade that stretches below the muzzle is sharp and can be used during close combat. At first, Beet can only fire on shot with the Cyclone Gunner. At first, Beet thought that this was because of the difference between his and Alside's level of wind tengeki, but in order to fire multiple shots, Beet soon discovered that he had to sync his breathing with the gun's.

Crown Shield This is the Saiga of Cruss, another member of the Zenon Warriors. It was made from the Divine Power of Water. This Saiga is known as the world's strongest shield. While it is primarily used to deflect attacks, it can also turn into a ball and chain that can be used to pound enemies into the ground. This Saiga also can cleanse a body of poisons, make it a very versatile saiga. In the recently released volume 11 in the US, Cruss is showned to have recovered his memories and have personally instructed Beet in the use of this Saiga. Whether or not Beet managed to completely master it is still to be seen.

Boltic Axe This Saiga was wielded by Bluezam of the Zenon Warriors. It is formed from the Divine Power of Thunder. Beet did not use this Saiga very often because it is hard to control, and takes a long time to materialize. However, it is the most powerful of the Saiga, and in the end he was able to defeat Grineed with it. After the battle with Grineed, Beet has learned it control it by setting his aim right before it is fully materialized when it weighs nothing.
